

Fans respond to Adams' walkout

SOME Wanderers fans have said the resignation of Tony Adams has come as a relief, with others saying he shouldn't have come in the first place.

The Chairboys supporters reacted after the initial shock of seeing their manager quit after barely a year in charge of Wycombe.

Sharon Deighton, who used to be a representative of the Wycombe Wanderers Independent Supporters Club, thought it was the end of an error.

She said: "I wasn't particularly impressed when we appointed him. I felt we needed a manager with experience.

"We have a lot of promises with the change in constitution and everything and I think we needed some stability. For him to walk out like that I feel let down.

"We should have gone for John Gorman in the first place and he would be my choice now."

Barrie Penfold, who has been a season ticket holder for 12 years, was angry at Adams for quitting.

Turning his back on Blues: And some fans are happy to see the back of him

She said: "I'm very disappointed in him. If he doesn't want to be part of Wanderers then we're better off without him.

"His picture was on the front of last week's programme to celebrate his first year with the club. How could he allow that?

"He's not the man-for-Wycombe we thought he would be."

James Young reckons Adams has taken a bad situation and made it worse.

He said: "It's disappointing that he didn't live up to expectations and that when the going got tough, Tony bottled it.

"Tony got rid of almost an entire team that was struggling in the league above and replaced it with a team struggling in the league below. Thanks a lot Tony."

But Wanderers drummer Joe Stevens reckoned Adams had been a good appointment and he could have still done a job with the Blues.

He said: "I'm a bit gutted. I believed he would turn it round.

"When he came to the club he had nothing to work with but he's leaving the club in a much better position than it was when he came in.

"I'm pleased with the loan players he brought in and we've been playing better football. I thought he was doing a good job."
