

Wanderers old boys unite for tsunami match

SOME of the biggest names in Wycombe Wanderers' recent history are set to come out of retirement to help the victims of the tsunami disaster in south east Asia.

Jamie Bates, Simon Garner, Martin Taylor and Steve McGavin have all agreed to put their boots on again for The Chairboys in Wednesday's charity match against a Marlow XI at Marlow Football Club (ko 7.45pm).

They will be joined in the Wanderers' dream team against a Marlow XI for Wednesday's match (ko 7.45pm) by other stars of the 2001 FA Cup semi-final side such as Andy Rammell, Jason Cousins, Keith Ryan, Paul McCarthy and Steve Brown.

Matt Crossley, Tim Langford and Steve Thompson, from the Blues squad which won promotion to the Football League under Martin O'Neill, will also play for the Wanderers side which has been put together by the club's media manager Alan Hutchinson.

The match is also expected to give home fans the chance to watch the club's newest signing Steve Claridge on Bucks soil. He is expected to be given a run out against a Marlow XI which will include Wanderers old boys Dave Carroll, Keith Scott and Mark West along with former West Ham goalkeeper Phil Parkes.

Admission to the match is £10 for adults and a fiver for kids, but spectators are warned that there will be no parking in the club's official car park on the night.

There is also a load of top sporting memorabilia up for grabs in the half-time raffle including an autographed Chelsea football, a signed John Hartson Celtic shirt and signed shirts from Crystal Palace and West Ham.
