

Blues swoop for defender

WANDERERS are locked in negotiations with Southampton to sign defender Mike Williamson on a permanent deal.

The former Torquay United centre half has been on a season-long loan deal with the Blues and now boss John Gorman wants to make it full-time.

Wanderers have submitted a written offer to Premiership Saints and are now awaiting a reply.

Williamson said: "Wycombe have submitted a proposal to Southampton to sign me with a sell-on clause and I'm just waiting to see what will happen.

"I hope it can be sorted out. I just want something settled. It is between the chairmen now and hopefully it will be done soon.

"I am enjoying it at Wycombe and I want to sign here and settle down."

Former boss Tony Adams brought the 21-year old to Adams Park last summer and even though Williamson has lost his place under new gaffer John Gorman recently he is still desperate to commit himself to Blues.

He said: "It's nice to be wanted. I was disappointed when Tony Adams left because he brought me in and promised me a few things and it is a boost to my confidence that John Gorman still wants to sign me.

Williamson - who became a father earlier this month - is now desperate to win his first team berth back.

He said: "I've got to work hard and wait for my chance. I think I've got the ability to get back in the side now I've got to go and show it."

Gentlemen stop swearing please

BLUES boss John Gorman ordered his team's fans to clean up their language during Tuesday Berks and Bucks Cup derby at MK Dons.

The gaffer was so disgusted by the swearing from his side's small knot of supporters at the National Hockey Stadium that he stood up in the directors box and called on them to curb it.

Then, during the interval, one of his directors went into the crowd to repeat his instructions to cool it.

Tempers flared among the small crowd with Wanderers fans angry that the Dons, formerly known as FA Cup winners Wimbledon, have been allowed to relocate to Milton Keynes.

Some Blues fans even went as far as boycotting the game against a team they have dubbed The Franchise Club.

Thug fined

A 46-year-old man, from Chester, was given a fixed penalty notice under The Public Order Act, following an incident at The Causeway Stadium at around 5.30pm on Saturday, March 12.

The fine follows an incident at the end of Blues' first Fans Free Day which attracted a bumper crowd of 8,124.

It is alleged that a steward was attacked as he helped clear the car park. It's claimed he was attacked by a motorist, alleged to be accompanying Chester officials, who is said to have lost his temper and lashed out.

Stadium officer Richard Stanford, said: "The steward was just doing his job, but a guy got out of his car and attacked him, punched him a couple of times and pushed him in the bushes."
