

Antwi finally makes his Wanderers debut

INJURY jinxed Will Antwi made his first appearance since signing in the summer and nearly celebrated his return from the wilderness with a goal in the reserves' 2-0 win at Aylesbury.

The defender has suffered with a groin injury since arriving from Aldershot and needed surgery in Germany to put him back on the road to recovery.

But his nightmare ended when he came on as a half-time substitute and he nearly made it a dream debut when his header looked to have gone over the line, only for the referee to wave play on.

Antwi joked: "If video cameras were there, it would have definitely been a goal. The referee was about 50 yards away. It was over the line."

"But I was just glad to be out there. I enjoyed every minute of it."

Antwi added a vocal presence to the side and worked well with Aidan Collins at the back as Blues kept Aylesbury safely at an arm's length.

Antwi said: "I always try to pass on information."

It's part of my game trying to lead from the back and I just want to do what I normally do."

Meanwhile Antwi praised Wycombe's medicine men Shay Connoloy and Dave Jones for helping him get over the injury.

He said: "There were no effects at all to the injury. I've been back

Will Antwi

training for a fortnight and it's nearly perfect."

But Antwi is no looking too far ahead just yet.

He said: "I'm just going to take each day as it comes. I just want to get more games under my belt. I don't want to say anything else because it's early days still. I'm just enjoying everyday that I'm back out on the pitch."

"All you look for as a youngster is being out on the pitch with the boys playing football. I nearly lost that so I'm glad I'm back now."

● Blues youngsters are set to test themselves against European opposition this summer after being invited to Norway to play in the Jet 06 Cup where they will take on the likes of Racing Club Strasbourg and Olympic Lyonnais. The tournament starts on July 10 and it's the second year Wycombe have been invited to attend.

● Wanderers have signed the England U17 international Josh Mulvaney from Championship's Southampton.

The 16-year-old joined the Saints from Oxford United but has struggled to settle on the South Coast and wanted to move back to this area.

The midfielder has been training with Wycombe and was part of the Blues reserve team which beat Aylesbury to progress to the semi-final of the Berks and Bucks Cup in midweek.

Josh Mulvaney