Supporters asked to vote for new Wanderers kit

WANDERERS will launch new home and away kits next season and it is down to the supporters to choose which one they will play in.

The Blues have whittled it down to these four jerseys and they have been polling their supporters on the club's official database to see which design wins.

And in conjunction with the Bucks Free Press, Wanderers have agreed to extend the deadline until midnight on Monday to allow as many fans as possible to have their say.

General Manager Garry Adamson said: "We have made commitments to consult more widely with our supporters.

"By using the contact details on our supporter database we are able to carry out a wide consultation via email extremely quickly at virtually no cost.

"We urge all supporters who want to be involved in this kind of exercise to provide their contact information so that they can be included and to the thousands of supporters already registered.

"We look forward to receiving your views."

Fans can vote which of the two home shirts they would like to see in operation next season and also vote for the red or yellow away kit.

And supporters joining the online poll could win themselves a free kit in a lucky prize draw.

Any Wycombe supporters who are keen to register their vote and to be in with a chance of winning a Blues 2007/08 kit are advised to send an email to hannah.jemmett@wwfc.com

Torres blames the pro game

ARGENTINIAN ace Sergio Torres has blamed his latest injury on being a professional.

He believes the extra rigours of training every day have turned him from Mr Consistent, who never missed any games as a semi-professional, into someone who is now a regular in the treatment room.

The 25-year-old picked up a hamstring injury in the reserves forcing him out of last week's 0-0 draw with Notts County and making him a big doubt for tomorrow's trip to Bury.

He said: "It has been so frustrating. When I used to play for Basingstoke I never got injured in two years and went to work as well.

"I think it is because I have not always had to train every day that my muscles get tired."

● Wanderers Reserves were beaten 4-0 by unbeaten Southampton in the Pontins Holiday Combinatoin at Adams Park on Tuesday afternoon.

Recent signings Fola Onibuje and Scott McGleish formed a new partnership up front, with Sam Stockley playing at centre back in front of impressive 16-year-old keeper James Reading.

David McGoldrick fired Saints into a 1-0 interval lead before further goals from Josh Dutton Black and two for Bradley Wright-Phillips, brother of England player Shaun, completed the win.

Wanderers coach Keith Ryan said: "It was a tough game for our younger players.

"Some coped well and others didn't, but it was also an important match for some of the senior players who got some match practice."

Ryan reserved special praise for Reading, who kept the score down with a string of fine stops.

He said: "He did exceptionally well. It was a daunting game for a 16-year-old but he was excellent."

● Wycombe Wanderers will be hosting a reunion dinner on Friday, April 13, for the team that reached the final of the FA Amateur Cup in 1957.

More than 90,000 fans descended on Wembley stadium for the match against Bishop Aukland.

See the Bucks Free Press in the coming weeks for more details.

Hayes: Everything is in place for promotion

Blues convinced by ticket sales

WANDERERS MD Steve Hayes insists the club is ready for promotion – off the pitch.

He says the way the club staff handled the ticket rush for the Carling Cup semi-final double header against Chelsea proves that everything is tickety-boo off the field.

The ticket office staff sold 45,000 tickets in December and January and dealt with more than 10,500 telephone tickets sales.

Hayes says the club's CRM database helped ensure that everyone who wanted and deserved a ticket got one and were allocated them in either the singing or non-singing sections as requested.

Hayes was also quick to praise the club's behind the scenes staff for the way they produced semi-final merchandise even though they had just three weeks from their quarter-final victory at Charlton to turn the whole thing round.

He said: "Everyone stepped up and produced a quality service. It showed that we are building for the future.

"We had very few complaints and those we had were dealt with very quickly.

"We played Chelsea and Charlton over just a matter of weeks and proved we can cope with the big games."

● Wanderers head of business development, Karen Ellis, left the club this week to move back to her Gloucester roots.

Wanderers waited six months to appoint her from her previous post at Gloucester RFC but she lasted less than a year.

Captain sounds rallying cry as Wycombe enter home stretch

TOMMY Mooney has told his team-mates that the time has come to prove themselves.

With 14 League games remaining, the Blues skipper has urged his team-mates to rediscover their form or face another season of frustration.

But Mooney admits that after a run of just two wins in the last 11 games, promotion might have to be won via the play-offs.

He said: "Automatic promotion will be very difficult. The first two places are probably beyond us and we are nine points off Swindon.

"Towards the end of the season, when you're playing twice a week, you can make the points up and we have to play the teams around us as well.

"It's still a possibility, and as long as there is a chance we'll keep trying."

But even if they do miss out, Mooney has stressed the importance of hitting form going into the play-offs.

He said: "In terms of the play-offs, the form team seems to win it. The team who has played well in March and April is the one to watch.

"I remember when I was with Watford we won 12 of our last 13 games and won the play-offs. We did a similar thing when I went up with Birmingham, winning 13 of our last 14 games."

As captain, Mooney is the man the rest will look to to launch Blues' charge, and the striker is determined to end his barren run in front of goal and get up towards the 20-goal mark by May.

He said: "I'm certainly not scoring as much as I would like.

"I'm playing a bit deeper than I would do normally. Jermaine Easter is playing on the shoulder of the last man, so I'm not getting as many chances as I have in the past.

"It bothers me, although I should not be overly concerned about it."

Mooney scored eight goals in his first 13 games this season but has notched just two more in the 23 games since.

He said: "Even though I am 35 and have been a professional since 1991, I still feel pressure.

"I put more pressure on myself than anyone else. My own standards are high and I'll be disappointed if I don't get near 20 goals this season.

"You feel pressure in every game, but it's hard for myself and Jermaine as we (Wycombe) don't score many goals from midfield."
