

Two more coaches join after legends are ousted

WANDERERS have hired two more coaches just weeks after sacking Adams Park legends Steve Brown and Keith Ryan to save money.

The club said they had to get the ex-players off the coaching staff for financial reasons.

They also gave goalkeeping coach John Granville and youth team coach Scott Marshall the boot for the same reason.

But as those four were shown the door, three new faces are joining the coaching staff.

The Free Press revealed last week that Laurence Batty has quit his job as goalkeeping coach at Chelsea's academy in favour of the offer of a three-year post as Wanderers' goalkeeping coach.

And now two more new coaches came on board this week as well.

Greg Heald has been appointed youth team boss, while Richard Dobson is coming in as head of the Centre of Excellence.

Heald, 36, has been working as a fireman since bringing the curtain down on a playing career which took in Peterborough, Barnet, Leyton Orient and Rochdale.

He replaces Ian Culverhouse as youth team manager following Cully's promotion to the newly-created role of head coach. That role was created following the departures of assistant manager

Brown and first team coach Ryan.

Dobson, a former Brentford player and youth team coach, will head up the Centre of Excellence.

● Scott Shulton fired a hat-trick to ensure that Wanderers' youth team finished on top of their group in the Junior Elite Tournament in Norway.

His treble against Stabek ensured that Wycombe finished top of a tough pool which included Scandinavian big-boys Tromso and Rosenborgs.

David Pearce, Callum Botham and George Daly also netted in the rout.

● Wanderers' first team continue their build up to the new season with a game against German third division outfit SC Verl tomorrow.

The Blues have spent the week at their training camp in Germany with the exceptions of Fola Onibuje, Leon Crooks and Tom Cadmore, who were left behind.

● Adams Park will throw open its doors to supporters for an open day on Sunday, August 5.

Fans will be able to tour the ground, meet the players and even test the strength of their shot.
