

Last man out leads by example

Best foot forward: Scott McGleish against Shrewsbury

BRADFORD City had better watch out if Scott McGleish is the last Wycombe Wanderer out of the tunnel tomorrow.

The striker has scored in his last two matches – ever since Sam Stockley has put him at the back of the queue when Wanderers run out.

McGleish was the last one onto the pitch when he opened his account for the season with the opener in the 2-1 win at Macclesfield Town a fortnight ago.

And he was the tail-ender again on Saturday when he finally broke his Adams Park scoring drought after nine previous barren attempts on home soil.

The 33-year-old said: "I'm not really superstitious like that. It has never fazed me what position I run out in or anything like that.

"But Stocks pointed it out and it seems to be working so I might as well stick with it."

McGleish admitted breaking his home duck last weekend was a weight off his mind.

The 33-year-old joined Wanderers from Northampton in January, but had not managed to find the net in front of the home fans in ten attempts.

That changed during the visit of Shrewsbury on Saturday, when McGleish headed Russell Martin's cross home to secure a 1-1 draw.

He said: "If I hadn't got a goal this week it might have started to play on my mind, so I'm glad it's out of the way now and it is a relief to show the home fans what I can do.

"I feel over the last month that my game has picked up. I've scored in the last two games and hopefully this is a scoring run that is going to continue."

But he may have to fight for his place at the back of the queue when the two teams emerge with Matt Bloomfield also favouring coming out last.

Who is the most superstitious player ever to wear the Wanderers quarters? And what about you the fans. Do you have to walk on the same side of the road to get to each game, do you have a lucky newsagents you visit each game or do you have to be wearing your lucky Y-fronts before you take your place on the terraces?
