

Daggers will be our biggest test of the season

WANDERERS boss Peter Taylor has warned his League Two leaders that they face their toughest test of the season when they roll up at free-scoring Dagenham tomorrow.

The Daggers have blasted 46 goals already this season and hit six twice in victories over Notts County and Chester and Taylor is concerned.

Taylor said: "This will be our biggest test by a mile.

"I really respect John Still and his team. When we beat them at home earlier in the season I was really impressed by them.

"They have scored an awful lot of goals and they create more chances than anyone else I have seen.

"They are the most positive team in the division. When they cross the ball they are always a danger and they will put us under pressure all afternoon."

He says it won't be just his defence that comes under serious pressure tomorrow. He says his whole team are going to have to defend for their lives from front to back if they are not going to come a cropper.

Blues are boosted by the return from suspension of midfield maestro Tommy Doherty who missed Saturday's 1-0 win at Bury.

New signing Chris Casement goes straight into the squad and Taylor must decide whether to give him a debut at right back or continue with Leon Crooks who did nothing wrong on Saturday.

Scott McGleish also looks set to be added to the squad after returning from his loan spell at League One side Northampton.

● Blues are hoping Chris Zebroski could be in contention for next week's Grimsby game following his injury against Eastwood where he needed 20 stitches in his ankle.
