Injury problems mount for Wanderers

WANDERERS assistant manager Junior Lewis had to appear as a substitute in Blues' defeat at Dover because of a shortage of fit players.

New signing Stuart Green has developed a thigh problem, while fellow new-boy Lewis Montrose is still feeling discomfort in his foot after taking a whack in the Windsor win.

TJ Moncur felt his hamstring after training on Monday and Leon Johnson developed a thigh problem during Friday night's 1-0 win over Eastbourne Borough.

Moncur's absence, and the news that regular right back Lewis Hunt will miss most of the first month of the season, meant that boss Peter Taylor (right) had to employ centre half Chris Westwood in that position on Saturday.

Taylor said: "Westy can play anywhere along the back four and can do the job at right back for us."

Taylor is confident that the weekend's injuries are not too serious but decided not to take any chances.

Taylor said: "There is no point taking any risks."

But of greater concern was the non-appearance of last year's Player of the Year, Craig Woodman, who has a thigh injury.

The left back hasn't featured in any of the Chairboys pre-season games so far and the big kick-off against Charlton on August 8 away at The Valley is now less than a fortnight away.
