

WE BLEW IT

WANDERERS boss Gary Waddock slammed his side for tossing away two much-needed survival points against Exeter but promised the fans we are not down yet.

Blues looked set to beat their relegation rivals when they led 2-0 with less than half an hour to go.

But the Devonians hit back to snatch a point from a 2-2 draw to leave Wanderers stunned.

Waddock - who said he felt as low as he has done in his six months at Adams Park - was furious.

He said: "We wasted an opportunity to get three points on a side that's in an around us and I can't explain it.

"It is a bitter pill to swallow. The game should never have taken that course. We've got a lot of experienced pros in the dressing room and we should be able to see a game out.

"Winning is a habit and so is losing. You have got to be strong mentally and see games out. It's not very difficult.

"We got ourselves into a good position and shot ourselves in the foot."

There was little his side could do about Exeter's first goal cracked in from 30 yards after strikes from Gareth Ainsworth and Stuart Beavon had put Wycombe 2-0 up.

But he was furious with the way they conceded an 89th minute equaliser for the second week running.

He fumed: "Our lads were looking to play offside and you don't play offside in those situations."

But although the draw kept Blues seven points short of safety with nine matches left, Waddock says his men will bounce back.

He said: "It's not over by a long way. There's a lot of fight left in me and the players and there will be until the bitter end. Until it's mathematically sorted we'll keep going."
