Wanderers' form (last ten): LWDLWWLLLD

■ Five defeats in last ten league games

■ Manager admits team are out of form

WANDERERS were given a 'reality check' on Saturday after another defeat, with boss Gary Waddock admitting his side haven't played well enough in the last month.

A 1-0 loss to Stevenage – for whom former Wycombe player John Mousinho scored – means Blues have now only won once in their last five matches at Adams Park.

And Waddock said his side haven't had just the one bad day in the last month.

He said the positive results they have picked up in that time, with wins at Barnet and Macclesfield Town and a 4-1 Adams Park hammering of Burton Albion, papered over the cracks of a disappointing month.

As Blues enter the home straight in what has been a promising season, they have suffered five defeats in their last ten games.

This time last month Wanderers went into a match at Bradford City knowing a win would take them to within two points of leaders Chesterfield with a game in hand.

But the Bradford game was the first in a run of three straight losses and Wycombe fell to a fourth defeat in six when the Spireites thumped them 4-1 at the b2net stadium at the start of the month.

And Waddock admitted on Saturday: "We've not really performed well recently so I wouldn't say it's just one bad day. We've had a few in recent weeks where we've not performed.

We've got one or two results but in the main the performances haven't been good enough.

"Today was a reality check. They need to dust themselves down and get back to what we are good at. At the moment we are not performing to the levels we did and have done during the course of the season, and we have to get back to that."

Waddock was left tearing his hair out as Wanderers failed to force visiting goalkeeper Chris Day into a single save despite playing against ten men for the final quarter of the game.

The Blues boss was in the dressing room with his players for around half an hour before he eventually came out to speak to the press.

He said: "We had a chat. I said what I'm saying to you, that performances haven't been good enough and today's result and performance wasn't good enough.

"We didn't work the keeper and Bully [goalkeeper Nikki Bull] has pulled off a number of decent saves again."
