

YOUR football club needs your support in their bid to break through to League One.

This week we are again asking readers to 'Back The Blues' as we continue our campaign to get as many fans along to Adams Park from now until the end of the season.

Wanderers are in with a great chance of winning promotion playing some superb football, and we want supporters to roar them on and into a higher division.

Below, supporter Colin Treacher explains why your backing is so important.

And don't miss Friday's Bucks Free Press for the next competition to run alongside our campaign.

I'm backing the Blues, are you?

I STARTED watching Wycombe Wanderers in the late 1960s. Since then it has been great fun supporting the local team and witnessing a tremendous journey, which has taken the club from part-timers in the Isthmian League to full-time professionals in the Football League, and from Loakes Park to Adams Park.

Back then, nobody would have thought it possible that our little club would go on to play Manchester City and Leeds United in league fixtures, never mind Liverpool and Chelsea in FA and Carling Cup semi-finals.

Another step on that journey could be just around the corner. With nine games to play, we are in the third automatic promotion spot and therefore in with a great chance of regaining our League One status.

Now more than ever the team needs as many supporters as possible to get behind them. Home games have been a bit quiet recently, with attendances down in these difficult times.

The club are offering supporters the chance to attend the remaining four home games for a total of £40, and if you know a season ticket holder who hasn't used up his or her three guest tickets, you could even attend some games for free! The team are playing attractive football and Adams Park is a friendly and safe environment for a Saturday afternoon out.
